Guide to the Codebook Document

Analytic Considerations

Using 2002 Census estimates, (U.S. Census Bureau, 2000) investigators applied post-stratification weights to adjust for race proportion differences between our sample and national statistics. It should be noted that, since interviews were conducted in English only, this weighting procedure can only increase representation among English speaking Hispanics. The investigators also applied weights to adjust for within household probability of selection due to variation in the number of eligible children across households and the fact that the experiences of only one child per household were included in the study.

Some of the component weighting variables (rceth_wt, hh_wght, pop_wght) were included with the data just to provide transparency for any user who would like to see how the final weights were derived. For the typical user the weights of interest are tot_wght (total weight) and scl_wght (scaled weight). Tot_wght would be used to project national estimates in terms of numbers or rates of victimization (as of 2002). Scl_wght would be used for significance testing of weighted data to maintain appropriate n's (scaled weights are directly proportional to total weights, but sum to n = 2,027, the approximate sample size).

Race/Ethnicity Weight (rceth_wt): post-stratification weights computed to adjust for under-sampling of Black and Hispanic children. Based on July, 2002, census estimates.

Household Weight (hh_wght): child household sampling weight computed to adjust for number of eligible children in a household (only one child chosen per household).

Population Weight (pop_wght): multiplier to equate sample total to national child population total. Based on July, 2002, census estimates.

Total Weight (tot_wght): combination of three previous weights.

Scaled Weight (scl_wght): total weight scaled to sum to sample total; for use in significance testing to maintain appropriate n's.
